

First and foremost, I love being a teacher advisor and believe in how we do learning at Seven Oaks Met with all of my heart. As an educator, I believe in supporting my students in cultivating a passion and value for learning. I believe it is my responsibility to spark curiosity, to value and encourage questions, and to support my students in developing a true love of learning, however that looks for them. The world is such a diverse and amazing place and I hope to support my students as they discover and explore what it is that they love learning about. Every learner is unique, and I feel it is at the center of my beliefs as an educator to honour this and build relationships and learning around it.

I am passionate and interested in learning about so many things, and my family and friends would most definitely classify me as a geek. I love science and am especially passionate about marine invertebrates, and how we can live more sustainably to protect our beautiful planet. I love reading: mysteries, thrillers, non-fiction, Harry Potter, you name it and I will probably read it. I am a Disney die-hard, and fell in love with art and drawing as a child watching the films. Being active, through team sports, running or hanging out with my dog Duke, are more of the things I love. I also love travelling, most likely stemming from summer long-trips with my whole family across North America, squished into a big green van. Education, in all of its forms, has shaped who I am today, and I am so excited to continue to grow and learn so I can be the best possible educator I can be.
